Over 21K tax refunds totaling $27.8M issued

Division of Revenue and Taxation has issued 21,654 tax refunds totaling more than $27.8 million. This distribution includes refunds and rebates, Child Tax Credits, and Earned Income Tax Credits, providing substantial financial relief to CNMI taxpayers.

The breakdown of the refunds is as follows:

- Refunds and rebates: $5,477,079
- Child Tax Credit (CTC): $6,544,404
- Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC): $15,793,316

CTC and EITC are critical tax credit programs that support qualifying families with children and low to moderate-income working individuals and families, respectively.

DRT estimates that approximately 65% of 1040CM returns have been successfully processed. The DRT team processes tax returns daily, and refunds are uploaded weekly.

As of this week, DRT will begin processing the American Opportunity Tax Credit refunds and will keep the public updated on its progress on more complex returns.

"Tax refunds provide much needed financial relief to our residents and stimulate our local economy," Gov. Arnold I. Palacios said. "I commend the Department of Finance for their diligent efforts in processing these refunds."

"Our team has been working hard to ensure that all eligible taxpayers receive their refunds promptly and we continue to release batches weekly," Finance Secretary Tracy B. Norita said. "The timely distribution of over $27 million is a testament to our commitment to efficient and effective public service, and we're thankful for the community's patience as we push forward this tax season."

Norita urges taxpayers who have yet to receive their refunds to check their status by contacting the Division of Revenue and Taxation at (670) 664-1040. For more information, visit the CNMI Department of Finance's website at www.finance.gov.mp. (PR)

Ygnem wins the Pride Karaoke Contest

By RACQUEL H. FLOYD

raxfloyd@gmail.com
CORRESPONDENT

A Northern Marianas College student took home $100 cash and a trophy last Saturday at the Pride Karaoke Contest held at Tom Yum Restaurant in Garapan.

Out of the 13 walk-in contestants, 24-year-old John Morgan Ygnem aka "John Legend," won the Pride Karaoke Contest. The competition is a collaboration between Sincerely Saipan Destinations and Tom Yum Restaurant.

The other contestants were Elmer Belgado, Albert Lansangan, Jennifer Martin, Marina Reyes, Ann, Nana, Loida Oliver, Donnel Isip, Juliana Kai Ortiz, Tina Matsunga, Isabella Matsunga, and Marvin Vino.

Ygnem told Saipan Tribune that he started singing at the age of 5. He arrived at Tom Yum just to sing karaoke and only that evening did he find out that there was a competition. It was his second time to join a karaoke competition at Tom Yum and he planned to join the CNMI Got Talent last December but he went off-island.

"I gave half of my prize to the waitstaff and brought the other half home," said Ygnem.

Chris Stapleton's "Tennessee Whiskey" was the song that gave him the win that night, even though he goes by the name John Legend.

Meanwhile, 9-year-old Juliana Kai Ortiz, who sang Whitney Houston's "I Have Nothing," won first place and received $50 cash and a trophy. Ortiz won the Governor's Award and finished second in the 2023 CNMI Got Talent. "I always give my prize to my mom for her to keep it, so that when the time comes, we need money we don't have to ask money from other people," she said.

Isip's stirring performance of an Elvis Presley classic secured him second place, and Albert Lansangan finished in the Top 4.

According to PK Phom machanh-Daigo, founder of Sincerely Saipan Destinations, "Karaoke was not just a night of entertainment but a reminder of the ongoing struggle for LGBTQ+ rights worldwide."

Daigo extended their gratitude to the allies and supporters who made Pride Karaoke possible, "their commitment to inclusivity and equality resonates deeply within our community. Plans are already in motion for another karaoke contest next month, specifically aimed at our youth—a testament to ongoing efforts to nurture talent and provide safe spaces for expression," he added.

According to Tom Yum owner Phanee Regan, "Pride Karaoke in our restaurant was more than just a competition; it was a celebration of diversity, unity, and the resilience of the human spirit. On Saipan, as in communities worldwide, events like this remind us that together, we can create a future where everyone can live and love freely."

Members of the judging panel were Ellen Delos Santos, owner of Relox Bar; Edwin Maratas, owner of 9Eleven Restobar; Alex Hu, VP Sales of Island Training Solutions; and Daigo, principal partner at LaBine & Associates and founder of Sincerely Saipan Destinations.

Hapi Canezares Gabriel was the emcee of event.

CPA passes resolution to establish airport incentive program

By KIMBERLY B. ESMORES
kimberly_esmores@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Despite tensions rising between board members, a majority of the Commonwealth Ports Authority board voted in favor of passing a resolution that would make way for the establishment of an airline incentive program. Yesterday, tension arose between board member Thomas Villagomez and board vice chair Anthony Cabrera during the voting process of CPA resolution 2024-04.

Villagomez, along with board member Ramon Tebuteb, raised concerns about passing the resolution as they practiced their fiduciary duties to ensure that CPA wasn't violating any rules and regulations.

In response, Cabrera stated that all that was needed was a yes or no answer adding that multiple discussions about the resolution had already been had and it was time to vote.

Ultimately, Villagomez voted against the resolution's passing while Tebuteb chose not to vote at all.

Meanwhile, the resolution passed, 5-1, with the other five board members voting in favor of it.

Essentially the resolution passed reinstates airport fees prior to the October 2023 rate adjustment to allow the special committee to finalize an airport incentive program.

"I'm going to frank, we can discuss details all day, but times are changing. Things are developing and we have to make changes as we go. It's not perfect but we're trying to address something that can really impact our islands. We can talk about this subject to death but nothing will happen while in the meantime our economy is slowly dying as we are busy [arguing]," CPA chair Joe Ayuyu said.

According to Saipan Tribune archives, back in September 2023, the previous CPA board adopted a new rate methodology that reflected a 90% increase in landing fees and a 79% increase in terminal rental fees which makes up CPA's fiscal year 2024 budget.

The increase took effect in October 2023.

With the adopted budget, the CPA terminal rental rates for the Francisco C. Ada/Saipan International Airport's main terminal went up from $19.49 per square foot to $34.92. Meanwhile, the terminal rental rates for all CNMI commuter terminals went up from $7.79 to $13.97.

As for landing fees, with the 90% increase, CPA charges international airline carriers $15.25 per thousand lbs of certified maximum gross landing weight of the aircraft; they were previously being charged $8.01. As for CNMI commuter terminals, the 90%-increase brings landing fees up from $4.81 to $9.15.

ARRIVALS

MVA managing director Chris Concepcion shared that as of May, the CNMI has seen over 160,000 visitor arrivals.

This puts the CNMI on track to exceed the number of arrivals seen last fiscal year which was around 194,700.

"As of May, [the CNMI's seen] 160,151 visitors so far for this fiscal year. We are on track to exceed last fiscal year but still 61% lower than before Super Typhoon Yutu and 37% lower than before the pandemic," he said.

Concepcion shared that Korea makes up most of the CNMI's visitor arrivals.

"We are seeing a solid performance from our Korea market but countered by strong challenges in our other source markets. Korea comprised almost half of all arrivals before Super Typhoon Yutu and the pandemic. Today, Korea represents 76% of all our visitors," he said.

As for the rest of the market, Japan and China hold a small share.

"Japan is about the same market share before the typhoon and the pandemic. We expect Japan numbers to grow slowly but the extremely unfavorable exchange rates, their stagnant economy, and their shift toward domestic travel are really slowing recovery. Arrivals from China were about equal to Korea but are now only 6% of our market share," he said.

Fortunately, Concepcion said the China market is expected to grow as Hong Kong Airlines' twice-weekly flights continues.

"Hong Kong Airlines started twice-weekly flights to Saipan last April which is great news. Marketing of those flights are being led by our private sector partners as MVA hasn't had an office in China since COVID. There is incremental growth anticipated from China with these flights from Hong Kong but we just don't have the same number of direct flights as we had before the pandemic," he said.

Regarding the development of a strong, third source market, Concepcion said MVA has explored Taiwan, Australia, and Singapore.

"We attended meeting, trade shows, expos, road shows to reintroduce the Marianas to airlines, tour operators, travel agencies who might be interested in doing business here. We will continue this effort, but we must note that once committed partners are identified, it will take time and a lot of money to open a new market that is not yet familiar with the Marianas," he said.

On a positive note, Concepcion said the CNMI is seeing more traction in destination enhancement, which in turn makes for better visitors experience.

USS

Peralta has a crew of 330 and she arrived on Saipan last June 18.

"So, our visit here is just part of a routine port visit. Our ship is stationed out of Ishigaki, Japan and we operate in the Western Pacific in the southern Fleet area of responsibility. We routinely patrol all the waters of the Western Pacific and while we're out on patrol, we routinely pull in the ports of opportunity for rest and relaxation and also to resupply fuel and food," said USS Rafael Peralta Commanding Officer Cmdr. Stephen Szachta.

The USS Rafael Peralta crew hosted a tour for Palacios, Aparang, and members of the media. Visitors were guided through the ship by subject matter experts who explained how the crew safely operates and navigates the vessel.

During the tour, when a canteen was shown, a question was asked if they never ran out of food. "Oh, so we generally try to take anywhere between 30 and 45 days' worth of food when we're out, just gets us flexibility, how often we can stay out so what we try to do is every time we pull into a port, we're trying to get food and gas pouring that the Navy also has what we call underway replenishments," said USS Rafael Peralta Executive Officer Cmdr. Cam Massey.

The USS Rafael Peralta is expected to depart tomorrow morning.

USS Rafael Peralta is an Arleigh Burke-class guided missile destroyer in the United States Navy. The destroyer can operate with a Carrier Strike Group, Expeditionary Strike Group, as an element of a Surface Action Group, or independently. The ship can conduct a variety of missions in support of national military strategy. From peacetime presence and crisis management to sea control and power projection, 115 will be capable of carrying out Integrated Air and Missile Defense, Undersea Warfare, Surface Warfare, and Strike Warfare in multi-threat environments.

While Chapter 11 Bankruptcy allows for a business/individual to reorganize and restructure, Chapter 7 Bankruptcy essential means the complete liquidation of a business' property and assets which may result in the company's dissolution.

Glass argues that based on public information available, IPI does not have the financial wherewithal to successfully proceed under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code.

"The debtor has no business to reorganize, cannot show that there is a reasonable likelihood of rehabilitation, and has failed to maintain insurance. At the same time, the debtor seeks to encumber the bankruptcy estate with $7,000,000 in post-petition financing ($400,000 of which was allowed by this court's interim order, with the remaining amount to be decided at the final orders for First Day Motion's hearing on June 21,) putting the creditor body at a distinct disadvantage in the case. Neither the interests of the debtor's creditors nor its estate would be served by having the debtor continue to unnecessarily incur the expenses associated with a Chapter 11 reorganization. Accordingly, there is 'cause' under section 112(b) of the Bankruptcy Code for the court to convert [IPI's case] to a case under Chapter 7 of the Bankruptcy Code," he said.

Glass, in his motion, notes that the Commonwealth represents $87,573,315, or 52.8%, of IPI's largest unsecured claims.

"This debt has accumulated due to debtor's failure to make payments to several Commonwealth agencies since 2020," said Glass.

Breaking the over $87.5 million down, Glass said IPI owes $62,010,280 to the Commonwealth for non-payment of Annual License Fees due Aug. 12, 2020; Aug. 12, 2021; Aug. 12, 2022; and Aug. 12, 2023.

In addition, IPI owes the Commonwealth Casino Commission $17,620,000 for the non-payment of the Casino Regulatory Fees due Oct. 1, 2020; Oct. 1, 2021; Oct. 1, 2022; and Oct. 1, 2023, including associated penalties.

Lastly, Glass says IPI owes the Commonwealth Department of Finance Division of Taxation and Revenue $7,943,035.39 for the non-payment of its taxes, including penalties and interest.

"Debtor has not operated since 2020 and, thus, it has no income and is unable to pay post-petition obligations that continue to accrue—like its rent due April 28, 2024, that has not yet been paid, and the pending annual Casino License Fee that will be due Aug. 12, 2024. Debtor has no ability to generate revenue; its hotel building is unfinished and has never been operational. In addition, debtor has no ability to operate as a casino; its casino gaming license is currently suspended and, until they were stayed by the filing of this case, two proceedings seeking revocation of the license were pending due to debtor's failure to pay significant fees to the commission and for its failure to comply with an order of the commission requiring a payroll reserve," said Glass.

"The debtor has also failed to maintain appropriate fire and damage insurance and general liability insurance as required by its lease agreement LA 15-002S for its lease of public lands from the Commonwealth posing a significant risk to the debtor's bankruptcy estate and the public," Glass adds.

The NMI Bankruptcy Court is set to hear the motion in August.

Last April 19, 2024, IPI filed its Chapter 11 bankruptcy petition with the U.S. District Court for the NMI Bankruptcy Court.

in favor of it.

Essentially the resolution passed reinstates airport fees prior to the October 2023 rate adjustment to allow the special committee to finalize an airport incentive program.

"I'm going to frank, we can discuss details all day, but times are changing. Things are developing and we have to make changes as we go. It's not perfect but we're trying to address something that can really impact our islands. We can talk about this subject to death but nothing will happen while in the meantime our economy is slowly dying as we are busy [arguing]," CPA chair Joe Ayuyu said.

According to Saipan Tribune archives, back in September 2023, the previous CPA board adopted a new rate methodology that reflected a most creative battles the United States ever fought," said Farrell.

Farrell's talk provided a comprehensive overview of the historical significance and strategic intricacies of the Battle of Saipan, emphasizing the broader context of U.S. and Japanese military strategies during World War II.

Following the presentation, the media had a couple of minutes of brief conversation with Farrell and he shared the importance of the location of the Northern Mariana Islands and the importance in keeping history alive.

"The young people today in the Marianas need to understand that these islands are strategically located. There's nothing that anybody can do about that. The reason why wars have occurred here has nothing to do with the people or the islands themselves. It's their location. And if there's a larger company, a country, who has the desire, they will come and try to take this island. Or they will try to create a situation that will neutralize this island so that they can be doing what they want to do somewhere else."

Farrell said that's why it's important to understand that you cannot eliminate the concept of war totally.

"War is a reality that nobody likes, but everybody has to learn to deal with. So, what can you do to prepare yourself for it? Get well educated. Take good physical condition of yourselves and participate in your government. Participate in your government both locally and regionally. The more communications we have between people, the less likely we are to have misunderstandings. Most wars develop from misunderstandings," he shared.

'On Juneteenth, we celebrate the cause of freedom for all, and honor these ideals'

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Delegate Uifa'atali Amata Radewagen (R-A. Samoa) is highlighting the national Juneteenth holiday, created by Congress in 2021. This holiday celebrates freedom by recognizing the historic events of June 19, 1865, which is the day that news of freedom traveled to the last known place practicing slavery in the United States. President Abraham Lincoln had issued the Emancipation Proclamation more than two years before on New Year's Day, 1863.

"On Juneteenth, we celebrate the cause of freedom for all, and honor these ideals," said Radewagen. "Freedom prevailed in America, although for millions of people, it took nearly 90 years after the Declaration of Independence.

Radewagen

Juneteenth is a yearly reminder that this country must always cherish freedom, and that message has a special emotional component for our African American countrymen and women, which we all come together to celebrate. Each generation becomes the next guardian of these ideals so that America can always stand for 'life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.' (PR)

Donald Trump and that 'horrible' city

We're not fancy campaign consultants or anything, but it seems to us less than optimal to be the presumptive Republican Party nominee for president of the United States and then trash the swing-state city where your party plans to hold its convention just a few weeks later.

Precisely what Donald Trump said about Milwaukee in a closed-door meeting on Capitol Hill with Republican lawmakers is open to politically charged debate. Democrats seized on the phrase "horrible city," as first reported by Punchbowl, and Republicans then claimed Trump was taken out of context and was not so much making an aesthetic judgment (for which, we'd add, he hardly is qualified) as noting the prevalence of crime and other issues generally common to all urban locales, including Milwaukee. Trump supporters will no doubt laugh it off as fake news, as they have learned to do with so many of their candidate's ill-considered utterances. We'll take the Republicans at their word.

Still, we sympathize with our neighbor. The equally clueless Darren Bailey, a gubernatorial race loser, called Chicago a "hellhole" even as he was running for governor in a state that, last time we checked, includes Chicago. For the record, we think Milwaukee is a most attractive city with a really nice lakefront, robust eateries, a superb museum and theater scene, and an enviably glam casino of the kind Chicago now wishes it built years ago.

Another thing we like about Milwaukee, and Badgers in general, is the prevalent sense of humor. This pocket scandal brought it out very nicely, as first noted by Business Insider.

"Once he's settled in with his parole officer, I am certain he will discover that Milwaukee is a wonderful, vibrant and welcoming city full of diverse neighborhoods and a thriving business community," Rep. Gwen Moore of Wisconsin wrote on X, making Trump-infused lemonade.

Slapped silly in the U.S. of A

If you're collecting indices on the decline of civilization, you'll want to include this one on your list: two burly, overbuilt men, often bald and bearded and nearly always tattooed, facing each other across a waist-high table and taking turns slapping each other across their faces as hard as possible.

This is slap fighting. Reportedly this "sport" originated in Russia—that figures—and spread westward, apparently picking up momentum during the pandemic until it reached Nevada, where, in October 2022, the State Athletics Commission authorized the first regulated American slap fighting league: Power Slap.

The California Athletic Commission followed suit in December 2023, and Florida approved slap fighting in March. This month, the Combative Sports Advisory Board of the Texas Department of Licensing and Regulation is considering a change in state rules that would sanction slap fighting as a regulated combat sport. Early indications are that the answer will be yes.

This is a very bad idea.

Let's start with the obvious: Slap fighting punishes its participants with excessively brutal physical harm.

We're inclined to think of slapping as a feminized version of what men do when they get in a fight. It's the way girls fight. It's boxing lite.

This depiction of slapping, however, has nothing to do with slap fighting. The blows are powerful, vicious and damaging. Neurologist Nikos Evangelou told Sky News that the rotational forces applied to the brain by the impact of a hard slap, especially when the rules of slap fighting forbid flinching or other defensive actions, are a "recipe for disaster." He says, "It's all a matter of time before we see more serious brain injury from a dissection."

But this clinical assessment doesn't properly convey the brutality of slap fighting. For that, search "slap fighting" on YouTube and spend five minutes watching. If you haven't seen slap fighting before, I predict that you'll be shocked—or at least surprised—by how hard the blows are and by how much obvious damage is occurring.

Knockouts by the first blow are not uncommon. As the victims fall backward into the arms of husky attendants, you'll see their eyes roll back in their heads and their arms begin to tremble convulsively as they hit the floor. It's not a pretty sight.

I don't believe in the so-called "nanny state." The state should not interfere in the right of its citizens to engage in nearly any activity, even risky ones such as mountain climbing, jumping out of airplanes and smoking, as long as the rights of others are protected. If two men (or women) want to take turns slapping each other, that's their business.

But the state has an interest in regulating—and, in this case, prohibiting—the promotion of the violence and the values that slap fighting embodies, as well as the profit-taking industry that is already developing around this pseudo-sport.

By the term "state" I'm not referring to the mythical Deep State or even to the legislators, officials and bureaucrats who make up our government. The "state" I'm referring to is you and me and all the citizens who have agreed to participate in a social contract that serves the interests of individuals and our culture as a whole.

And that version of the state suffers damage when young men are given to understand that our culture unquestioningly values and supports the kind of meaningless violence embodied by slap fighting, especially when the violence is implicitly connected to the idea of what it means to be a man.

Dana White, the owner of Power Slap, calls slap fighting "the ultimate test of toughness." No, it isn't. It's actually a way for White and the developing slap-fighting industry to turn a profit that relies on human carnage and the promotion of a set of very bad values.

With mutual consent, Americans should be allowed to slap each other all they want. Knock yourself out. But the Texas Department of Licensing and Regulation should say no to the slap-fighting industry. So should the rest of us.

What was the point of last weekend's Ukraine peace summit?

Last weekend, the Bürgenstock Resort in the Swiss city of Obbürigen was a hive of diplomatic activity. The United States, Britain, France, Japan, Saudi Arabia, Kenya and dozens of other countries sent representatives to a conference that was designed to reinforce support for Ukraine as it resists Russian aggression and explore ideas that could bring the war to a close on Kyiv's terms. Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy spent months traveling the world to enlist as many participants as possible, going so far as to call out China in public for lobbying countries against participating.

For Ukraine's purposes, the two-day conference was a hit. Delegation after delegation denounced Russian President Vladimir Putin for invading a sovereign neighbor. European Council President Charles Michel spoke some Ukrainian to show solidarity. United Kingdom Prime Minister Rishi Sunak blasted Russia for escalating nuclear rhetoric. And Vice President Kamala Harris emphasized that the best way to protect the rules-based international order was to defend Ukraine's territorial integrity.

It all sounded pretty good from Zelenskyy's perspective. But other than nice words and a relatively short joint communique that reiterated the importance of the United Nations Charter and outlined three uncontroversial items—nuclear installations in Ukraine should be secured, the Black and Azov seas should be open for trade, and prisoners of war should be exchanged and unlawfully deported Ukrainian children be returned to Ukraine—it's hard to see what the conference achieved. In fact, we could question whether it was worth the effort at all.

The entire event was less about making peace and more about elevating Ukraine's own position for what an eventual peace should look like. There are no doubt leaders in the West who believe this is a worthy cause in and of itself, if only to demonstrate to Putin that his strategy of continuing the war until the West gets tired is a lost cause. But practically speaking, getting on a soapbox and reiterating how terrible Russia is—even if it's wholly justified—won't do anything to actually stop the killing and resolve the war.

Bluntly put: "Peace summit" is a misnomer. This gathering wasn't about peace at all. There were no negotiations going on between the two combatants; Russia wasn't even invited to the conference (not that Russia would have joined). With the exception of Ukraine, no country in the room was actually fighting on the front lines. There was no attempt to do the difficult but necessary work of forging potential compromises. And compromises will need to be forged if the war in Ukraine is to end.

Instead, what we got was a talkathon filled with statements that might as well have been written by the same speechwriters. The event, in essence, was a way to make participants feel like they were doing something without actually doing anything. It scratched a morality itch.

Like all wars, facts on the ground and the strategic calculus of the combatants—not speechifying in faraway capitals—are the most vital elements at play. Historically, wars end in one of three ways: one side beats the other, the fighting freezes along a de facto front line (e.g., the Korean Peninsula) or the combatants come to the realization that more can be achieved at the negotiating table than the battlefield. With respect to Russia and Ukraine, we aren't near that point yet.

As it stands, we could drive several trucks through the divide in Ukraine's and Russia's positions. The two remain motivated by an intense maximalism. A day before the summit in Switzerland kicked off, Putin proposed his own set of terms—if the Ukrainian army withdraws from the four Ukrainian territories Moscow annexed in 2022 and gives up on joining the NATO military alliance, then he will order his troops to cease warfare and order his diplomats to enter peace talks. The Ukrainian government rejected the proposal immediately, calling it an attempt by Putin to divert attention from the summit in the Swiss mountains.

Given that Russia doesn't fully control any of the four territories Putin now claims are part of Russia, Kyiv was right to be dismissive of Putin's ideas.

Ukraine, meanwhile, is just as absolutist as the Russians are. Zelenskyy talks a lot about a "just peace" for Ukraine, which sounds good in theory. In reality, though, Zelenskyy's diplomatic strategy centers on a wish list, akin to what a 5-year-old child recites while waiting in line at the mall to see Santa Claus. Ukraine's own terms include a total and complete Russian withdrawal from every square inch of Ukrainian territory, including Crimea, which Russia has occupied for a decade now; tens of billions of dollars in Russian compensation for war damage; and war crime prosecutions against Russian troops, officers and officials. Zelenskyy reaffirmed his position during the conference last weekend. Time and the Ukrainian army's inability to retake territory over the last year and a half apparently haven't had much impact on Zelenskyy's thinking.

"Russia can start negotiations tomorrow if they pull out of our territories," he told reporters during the conference.

Will Zelenskyy and Putin come around to ditching maximalism in favor of compromise? I don't know. But what was clear from the outset was that the Swiss confab wasn't going to move the needle either way.

DHS needs to resolve conflicting policies on stateless people

It's worrying when a government agency appears to go its own way over the stated commitments of the person in charge of overseeing it. Right now, Immigration and Customs Enforcement needs to do more to comply with the commitments of its leader, Homeland Security Secretary Alejandro Mayorkas, to help stateless people in America.

Sergei Kachenkov's story illustrates why. He's a member of United Stateless, a nonprofit organization founded by stateless people and where I'm the executive director. All our members have our own stories, but all stateless people are stuck in a legal limbo. We don't have passports from the countries of our birth, often because those countries disavow us for political, discriminatory or a host of other reasons, and many of us lack papers here in the United States. Sergei came to the United States fleeing the former Soviet Union in 1991. His Soviet passport is invalid because his country no longer exists. Now he lives in Alabama and is over 70. A retired real estate agent, he cares full-time for his wife, Marina, who is disabled and stateless, too. She worked for years managing Blockbuster Video stores.

Without laws to address statelessness, the couple were forced to seek other remedies for their situation, and so they applied for asylum. Their claim was denied years ago, and so they still face a final removal order by Immigration and Customs Enforcement. Because ICE won't lift that order, and has not adopted a policy about statelessness, Sergei and Marina can't get protection under new protections for stateless people, introduced last year.

Their predicament is a lot more than theoretical. It's real and paralyzing. Yet it is the result of an unusual situation where one agency under Mayorkas (ICE) hasn't kept up with the direction taken by another (U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services) or with Mayorkas' stated desire to help stateless people.

In December 2021, Mayorkas said the Department of Homeland Security would "enhance protections" for stateless people. And USCIS has since done much to honor that. In August 2023, USCIS amended its policy manual to define statelessness. It now addresses the legal needs of stateless people by allowing USCIS officers to consider statelessness as a positive factor in decisions. USCIS also considered statelessness in processes for H-1B employment visas. And the agency has adopted policies that can assist stateless students. We've also engaged with USCIS representatives, who have shown willingness to open dialogue.

ICE, however, has not kept up. That agency has not adopted its own policy on statelessness, and Sergei's and Marina's legal statuses are under ICE's authority, so they can't get protection under the new USCIS definition of statelessness. If ICE had a similar policy to the new USCIS definition, it could lift Sergei and Marina's final removal order, allowing people like them access to protections.

Despite having no criminal record whatsoever and despite paying taxes for more than 30 years, Sergei and Marina have also faced barriers accessing Social Security benefits. At one point, the elderly couple's benefits were cut off for two years and Marina had to turn to charity to cover her medical treatment. Sergei worries that his Social Security benefits will be cut off again and that he'll have to forage for food. He even said, "What am I going to do? Eat snakes from the woods behind our house?" When Sergei tried to explain to an officer about their predicament, he claims, the officer was rude. Sergei says the officer told the couple, "I don't care where you go, walk to Mexico, walk to Canada, just get out of this country."

Those aren't the words of a humane officer of the United States government. They sound a lot more like a soldier in the government of the country Sergei and Marina fled. I wish that Sergei's story was unique, but other United Stateless members have faced similar mistreatment.

Sergei and Marina's story is illustrative of situations facing many stateless people in the U.S. For all of us, being stateless makes living, working, and getting health care or an education very challenging. Even if the government tries to deport us, there is no country that will accept us. Many of us find ourselves in ICE detention as a result. In the end we are often released because there is nowhere for us to go, leaving some of us to live under deportation orders and under supervision for up to 30 years.

In February, Washington Post columnist Theresa Vargas wrote about one of our stateless community members. Henry Pachnowski is a stateless Holocaust survivor who couldn't access Social Security benefits. His story shows anyone can get caught up in being stateless. Numbering around 200,000, we are Harvard graduates and military veterans. We run businesses. We contribute taxes to Social Security. And yet many of us are still living in fear of a knock on the door from ICE. That's despite efforts by Mayorkas to assist.

It is time for ICE to get in line with its leadership, its sister agency and the international community. ICE must adopt the international definition of statelessness and ensure that legal protections are available to stateless people to avoid legal limbo and indefinite detention. And it can do more. It can also collect data on stateless people applying for immigration relief.

What I fail to understand is why ICE seems resistant to following Mayorkas's commitments. What's going on here?

US Pacific Territories Fishery Capacity-Building Scholarship available

The Western Pacific Regional Fishery Management Council and its Education Committee members are pleased to announce the availability of up to three graduate scholarships for the 2024-2025 academic year. These scholarships support the aspiration of American Samoa, Guam, and CNMI to build their capacity to effectively manage their fisheries and related resources by employing people from the local communities.

Students with strong ties to these territories are eligible for scholarships that cover the cost of tuition and fees and some living expenses. The amount will be based on the university's estimated cost of attendance. Scholarship funds will be given directly to the university to cover tuition and fees before disbursement of the remaining amount to the student.

Funding for the 2024-2025 academic year will be provided based on proof of continued progress in the university program and maintenance of a 3.0 grade point average or above. The scholarship is for up to two years maximum (four semesters). If, for any reason, students do not complete their degree or other scholarship requirements (see below), the student or his/her guarantor will be responsible to repay the scholarship amount used up to that point to the Western Pacific Regional Fishery Management Council.

EU criticizes France for excessive debt

BRUSSELS (AP)—The European Union's executive arm on Wednesday criticized France for running up excessive debt, a stinging rebuke at the height of an election campaign where President Emmanuel Macron is facing a strong challenge from the extreme right and the left.

The EU Commission recommended to seven nations, including France, that they start a so-called "excessive deficit procedure," the first step in a long process before any member state can be hemmed in and moved to take corrective action.

"Deficit criteria is not fulfilled in seven of our member states," said EU Commission Vice President Valdis Dombrovskis, pointing the finger at Belgium, Italy, Hungary, Malta, Slovakia and Poland, in addition to France.

For decades, the EU has set out targets for member states to keep their annual deficit within 3% of Gross Domestic Product and overall debt within 60% of output. Those targets have been disregarded when it was convenient, sometimes even by countries like Germany and France, the biggest economies could claim that Macron had overspent and still impoverished the French, leaving them no choice but to spend more still.

Despite the rebuke over excessive debt, EU Economy Commissioner Paolo Gentiloni stressed France was also moving in the right direction to address certain "imbalances," sending a "message of reassurance" to the EU institutions.

The International Monetary Fund forecasts that the French economy will grow at a relatively sluggish 0.8% of GDP in 2024, before rising to 1.3% in 2025.

And unlike the measures imposed on Greece during its dramatic fiscal crisis a decade ago, he said that excessive austerity was not an answer for the future.

"Much less does not mean back to austerity, because this would be a terrible mistake," he said.

He also disputed a claim that it was austerity itself drove voters to veer to the extreme right, pointing out that lenient budget conditions had been in force for the past years and still allowed the hard right to come out as victors in many member states.

Fate of latest cease-fire proposal hinges on Netanyahu, Hamas' leader in Gaza TEL AVIV, Israel (AP)—The fate of the proposed cease-fire deal for Gaza hinges in many ways on two men: Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Hamas' leader in Gaza, Yahya Sinwar. Each leader faces significant political and personal pressures that may be influencing their decision-making. And neither seems to be in a rush to make concessions to end the devastating eight-month-long war and free hostages taken by Hamas in its Oct. 7 attack. Hamas has accepted the broad outline of the plan but requested "amendments." Netanyahu has publicly disputed aspects of it, even though the U.S. has framed it as an Israeli plan. Among the major sticking points is how to move from an initial temporary truce in the deal's first phase to a permanent cease-fire that includes an end to the fighting and full withdrawal of Israeli troops from Gaza. Throughout the war, the long-serving Israeli leader has been criticized for letting political considerations get in the way of his decision-making. His government is buoyed by two ultranationalist parties that oppose cease-fire deals. Instead, they prefer continuous military pressure to try to defeat Hamas and free the hostages. They also talk about "encouraging" Palestinians to leave and reestablishing Israeli settlements, which were dismantled when Israel withdrew from Gaza in 2005 after a 38-year occupation.

Netanyahu himself has taken a tough line on the cease-fire, saying he will not end the war until Hamas' military and governing capabilities are destroyed.

N. Korea says deal between Putin, Kim requires immediate military assistance in event of war

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)—The new agreement between Russia and North Korea reached by their leaders at a Pyongyang summit requires both countries to use all available means to provide immediate military assistance in the event of war, North Korean state media said Thursday. Both North Korea's Kim Jong Un and Russia's Vladimir Putin had described the deal reached Wednesday as a major upgrade of bilateral relations, covering security, trade, investment, cultural and humanitarian ties. Outside observers said it could mark the strongest connection between Moscow and Pyongyang since the end of the Cold War. The North's official Korean Central News Agency on Thursday reported the language of the comprehensive strategic partnership agreement. The agency said Article 4 of the agreement states that if one of the countries gets invaded and is pushed into a state of war, the other must deploy "all means at its disposal without delay" to provide "military and other assistance." The summit between Kim and Putin came as the U.S. and its allies expressed growing concern over a possible arms arrangement in which Pyongyang provides Moscow with badly needed munitions for its war in Ukraine, in exchange for economic assistance and technology transfers that could enhance the threat posed by Kim's nuclear weapons and missile program. Following their summit, Kim said the two countries had a "fiery friendship," and that the deal was their "strongest-ever treaty," putting the relationship at the level of an alliance. He vowed full support for Russia's war in Ukraine. Putin called it a "breakthrough document" reflecting shared desires to move relations to a higher level.

PH demands China return rifles and pay for boat damage after hostilities in disputed sea

MANILA, Philippines (AP)—The Philippine military chief demanded Wednesday that China return several rifles and equipment seized by the Chinese coast guard in a disputed shoal and pay for damages in an assault he likened to an act of piracy in the South China Sea. Chinese personnel on board more than eight motorboats repeatedly rammed then boarded the two Philippine navy inflatable boats Monday to prevent Filipino navy personnel from transferring food and other supplies including firearms to a Philippine territorial outpost in Second Thomas Shoal, which is also claimed by Beijing, according to Philippine officials. After a scuffle and repeated collisions, the Chinese seized the boats and damaged them with machetes, knives and hammers. They also seized eight M4 rifles, which were packed in cases, navigation equipment and other supplies and wounded a number of Filipino navy personnel, including one who lost his right thumb, two Philippine security officials told The Associated Press on Tuesday. The two officials spoke on condition of anonymity because of a lack of authority to discuss the sensitive conflict publicly. Video and photographs issued by the Philippine military Wednesday night show the chaotic faceoff at the shoal, with Chinese personnel onboard boats brandishing knives, axe and sticks while surrounding two Philippine navy supply boats beside Manila's ship outpost. Sirens blare constantly as both sides yell at each other and the Chinese smash the Philippine navy boat with a pole and grab what appears to be a bag with a stick.

Emperor Naruhito looks forward to deepening ties with Britain's royals TOKYO (AP)—Japan's Emperor Naruhito said Wednesday he is "delighted" to finally be able to visit Britain after the trip was delayed by several years due to the COVID-19 pandemic. The royal said he looks forward to rekindling his friendship with the British royal family and exploring Oxford, where he studied about 40 years ago.

Naruhito and his wife, Empress Masako, will make a weeklong visit to Britain starting Saturday. The trip was originally planned for 2020 at the invitation of the late Queen Elizabeth II as a first of his overseas visits after his ascension to the Chrysanthemum Throne in 2019.

"I'm truly delighted to be able to make a visit to Britain this time," Naruhito told reporters ahead of his June 22-29 trip with Masako. The emperor said he regretted that they could not make the trip while Queen Elizabeth was alive.

"Through our upcoming visit, I would like to reflect on the long history of exchanges fostered between Japan and Britain," Naruhito said. He hoped to nurture the friendship with King Charles III and Queen Camilla and other members of Britain's royal family, and boost relations between the two sides through meetings and exchanges.

Naruhito thanked King Charles III for accommodating the visit despite him still recovering from cancer treatment. He wished both Charles and Katherine, the Princess of Wales, who is also undergoing cancer treatment, a speedy recovery.

Japan's imperial family has had close relations with Britain's royal family for three generations starting from his grandfather, late Emperor Hirohito.

Naruhito acknowledged that there had been difficult times when Japan and Britain fought on opposing sides during World War II, but he said Japan has since focused on peace and prosperity on the global stage.

Japan and Britain have developed strong ties in areas from the economy to science and technology and culture, he said.

The trip includes a visit to Oxford University, where both he and Masako studied separately before their marriage. Naruhito said he looks forward to returning to Oxford and exploring the city with his wife together for the first time.

Naruhito researched the 18th-century Thames River transport system while at Merton College from 1983 to 1985.

The emperor recalled the late queen serving him tea at Buckingham Palace when he visited London in 1983. He also fondly remembered being invited to a barbecue with the queen and other royals, and going fly fishing in Scotland with then-Prince Charles.

During his upcoming trip, Naruhito will visit the Thames Barrier, pay respects to the grave of the Unknown Warrior in Westminster Abbey, lay flowers at the tombs of Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip at the King George VI Chapel in Windsor, and visit the Royal Botanic Gardens in Kew, among other activities.

Lawyer for Rushdie accused attacker says client doesn't want offered plea deal

MAYVILLE, N.Y. (AP)—The New Jersey man accused of repeatedly stabbing author Salman Rushdie is not interested in an offered plea deal that would shorten his time in state prison but expose him to federal prison on a separate terrorism-related charge, his lawyer said Tuesday.

Hadi Matar, 26, sat silently in Chautauqua County Court as lawyers outlined a proposal they said was worked out between state and federal prosecutors and agreed to by Rushdie over the past several months.

The agreement would have Matar plead guilty in Chautauqua County to attempted murder in exchange for a maximum state prison sentence of 20 years, down from 25 years. He would then also plead guilty to a yet-to-be-filed federal charge of attempting to provide material support to a designated terrorist organization, which could result in an additional 20 years, attorneys said.

Matar, who has pleaded not guilty, has been held without bail since his 2022 arrest after prosecutors say he attacked Rushdie as the acclaimed writer was about to address an audience at the Chautauqua Institution in western New York. Rushdie was blinded in one eye. Moderator Henry Reese was also wounded.

Chautauqua County District Attorney Jason Schmidt said

Hadi Matar, the man charged with stabbing author Salman Rushdie, arrives for an arraignment at the Chautauqua County Courthouse, Aug. 13, 2022, in Mayville, N.Y. AP

Rushdie, who was stabbed more than a dozen times and detailed the near-fatal attack and painful recovery in a memoir, "Knife: Meditations After an Attempted Murder," favors the "global resolution" proposed in the case, which otherwise could mean two separate trials.

"His preference was to see this matter come to an end," said Schmidt. Without Rushdie's approval, Schmidt said he would have opposed reducing the maximum state prison term, given the nature of the attack.

"He came into Chautauqua County and then committed this crime, which is not just a crime against a person, but it's also a crime against a concept of freedom of speech," Schmidt said.

Matar's attorney, Nathaniel Barone, said Matar wants to take his chances at trial.

"He's saying, 'What have I got to lose?'" Barone said after the hearing.

Suffocated girlfriend finally calls it quits

DEAR ABBY: My girlfriend and I broke up after six years. Both of us have children from marriages that ended seven years ago. We reached a point a year and a half ago and started looking for a house together. After realizing we couldn't afford what she wanted in a home for our blended family, our relationship became strained. The last year has been our worst.

As she suffered through job loss and other outside forces affecting her mental health, I tried to offer her more support, but she felt suffocated. I am sometimes too intense trying to find solutions, even when she says she needs space. I have not kept up my end of giving her space.

We have had the best connection of our lives, so seeing her in pain has me distraught. She says she isn't able to give what I need in our relationship, while I have strived to be a good teammate in her times of need. Now she says she is done because I didn't give her space.

She is the love of my life. What do I do during this crushing and devastating time of my life?

DAZED IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR DAZED: I'm sorry things didn't turn out better for you. You and your girlfriend have very different communication styles. She wanted to vent and be heard. You felt compelled to find solutions to her problems. When someone says they "need space," it often means the person feels pushed or smothered. It can also mean they want to dial back the relationship or may have met someone else.

Right now, your next step should be a giant one BACKWARD. Increase your exercise schedule, spend time with friends and do not sit around alone and brooding over something you can't change. IF the two of you manage to get together again, I urge you to get into couples counseling so this kind of heartbreak doesn't happen again.

DEAR ABBY: Several months ago, I let the 49-year-old son of a dear friend move into my basement. "Jason" pays me rent plus utilities.

Last week, he informed me that he is not vaccinated for COVID. He was drinking at the time. Since my husband passed away with COVID in his system two years ago, I told Jason he would need to get vaccinated or find another place to live, but now I'm not sure he remembers the conversation.

How should I handle this? I don't want to alienate his mother (or him, whom I love like a son) over this.

HEALTH-CONSCIOUS IN COLORADO

DEAR HEALTH-CONSCIOUS: Ask Jason if he remembers the conversation you had in which he mentioned that he has not been vaccinated for COVID. If he doesn't recall having made the statement, remind him. Then tell him that when your husband passed, he had COVID in his system, that you do NOT want to risk being exposed to COVID and that if he wishes to continue living with you, he will have to stay current on his vaccines. This need not be a confrontation if you approach the subject calmly.

Murphy has pair of 2-run homers as Braves sweep Tigers hit a pair of two-run homers, Reynaldo López threw five scoreless innings and the Atlanta Braves completed a three-game sweep of the Detroit Tigers with a 7-0 victory on Wednesday.

ATLANTA
(AP)—Sean Murphy

López (5-2) lowered his MLB-leading ERA to 1.57. He allowed seven hits, walked one and struck out six. López has given up just four runs in 40 2/3 innings over six home starts this year.

The Braves went 5-1 on a six-game homestand and have won six of their past seven. They allowed just two runs combined in the series.

Murphy, who made the National League All-Star team last season, was hitting just .135 in 15 games this season entering the game. The catcher went 4-for-4 with 4 RBIs.

PIRATES 1, REDS 0

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Bryan Reynolds hit a go-ahead home run in the bottom of the eighth inning and Pittsburgh edged Cincinnati.

Reynolds pounced on an 80 mph changeup from Nick Martinez (2-5) and sent it just over the wall in center field for his 10th homer of the season as the Pirates took two of three from Cincinnati.

Colin Holderman (3-0) retired the three batters he faced in the eighth after coming on for a brilliant Mitch Keller. David Bednar worked a perfect ninth for his 16th save.

PADRES 5, PHILLIES 2

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Matt Waldron used his knuckleball to strike out six over seven innings and San Diego avoided a 10th straight road loss with a late rally off Philadelphia's bullpen.

A day after the Phillies used four consecutive ninth-inning hits to rally for a 4-3 win, Waldron (5-6) and two relievers helped the Padres snap a five-game skid that started against the Mets. The Padres avoided their first 0-6 trip since 2009 and had lost nine straight overall on the road. They hadn't lost 10 straight away games since 2013.

Bryce Harper homered twice for the Phillies, his 27th career multi-homer game and second of the season. His 17 homers are tied with Kyle Schwarber for the team lead.

MARLINS 4, CARDINALS 3

MIAMI (AP)—Otto Lopez hit a two-out single in the bottom of the ninth to drive in Tim Anderson and Miami defeated St. Louis.

López's liner off Ryan Fernandez (0-2) was bobbled by right fielder Alec Burleson, but is doubtful he would have had a play. Tanner Scott (6-5) got the win after pitching a scoreless top of the ninth.

The NL-worst Marlins took two of three from the Cardinals, who fell back below .500 at 36-37.

Kyle Gibson had been scheduled to start for the Cardinals after being on the bereavement list this week following a death in his family, but was scratched just before game time with back tightness.

CUBS 6, GIANTS 5

CHICAGO (AP)—Ian Happ hit a 442-foot homer, Dansby Swanson made it back-to-back longballs and the Chicago Cubs hung on to beat San Francisco.

Jorge Soler made it interesting in the eighth inning with a 444-foot grand slam over the bleachers in left field against Tyson Miller that got the Giants within one, but Colten Brewer pitched around back-to-back walks to Wilmer Flores and Brett Wisely in the ninth and finished for his first save.

Kyle Hendricks (1-4) pitched neatly into the sixth inning, allowing one run on two hits in his longest outing of the season and lowering his ERA from 8.20 to 7.46.

NATIONALS 3, DIAMONDBACKS 1

WASHINGTON (AP)—Jesse Winker hit a go-ahead, two-run homer in the sixth inning and Washington defeated Arizona.

Ildemaro Vargas added an RBI single for Washington, which has won nine of 11 overall and seven of its last eight at home.

Arizona (36-38) was denied getting back to .500 for the first time since April 16, when it was 9-9.

Arizona starter Brandon Pfaadt cruised through five scoreless innings in just 50 pitches, allowing just one runner to reach scoring position.

GUARDIANS 8, MARINERS 0

CLEVELAND (AP)—Tanner Bibee struck out a career-high 12 in six innings, Josh Naylor homered twice and had four RBIs, and Cleveland beat Seattle in a battle of American League division leaders.

Bibee (5-2) struck out multiple batters in each of the first five innings, allowing three hits and one walk. The right-hander had 11

Atlanta Braves' Sean Murphy (12) rounds the bases after he hit a two-run homer against the Detroit Tigers in the third inning of a baseball game, Wednesday, June 19, 2024, in Atlanta.

strikeouts in his previous start on June 12 at Cincinnati, his first double-digit game in the majors.

Steven Kwan hit a two-run homer and José Ramírez and Bo Naylor each had two hits for the Guardians, who are five games ahead of Minnesota in the Central and have won 22 of 31 games at Progressive Field this season.

RED SOX 7, BLUE JAYS 3

TORONTO (AP)—Jарren Duran and Enmanuel Valdez hit solo home runs, Brayan Bello pitched six innings to snap a three-start winless streak, and Boston beat Toronto to complete a three-game sweep.

Duran, who had two hits and two RBIs, extended his hitting streak to 10 games. Valdez scored all three times he reached base as the Red Sox won their fifth straight and for the eighth time in their last 10 games.

The past eight series between Boston and Toronto have all been sweeps, with the Red Sox winning three. The Blue Jays and Orioles also had eight straight meetings finish as sweeps in 2009 and 2010.

Toronto made four errors. The Blue Jays are 9-20 when they make at least one error.

ASTROS 4, WHITE SOX 1

CHICAGO (AP)—Hunter Brown tossed six innings of one-run ball for his third straight win, backup catcher César Salazar had a pair of RBI singles and Houston topped the Chicago White Sox.

Jake Meyers lined a pair of doubles to end an 0-for-17 slump and scored two runs to help Houston end a two-game slide. Mauricio Dubón drove in a run with a ground-out and single to extend his hitting streak to 12 games. Chas McCormick added a sac fly.

RANGERS 5, METS 3

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP)—Leody Taveras hit a tiebreaking two-run homer in the seventh inning and Texas, after not having a hit until the sixth, beat the New York Mets.

The slumping Texas center fielder didn't even start the game, but entered on defense in the top of the seventh. He had only five hits in 59 at-bats (.085) his last 18 games until the homer to right-center off reliever Drew Smith (1-1).

The reigning World Series champion Rangers ended a five-game losing streak and avoided being swept in consecutive series. They are still nine games behind AL West-leading Seattle, which took all three games against them last weekend.

Pete Alonso hit his 16th homer for the Mets, whose seven-game winning streak was their longest this season. They had won 11 of their previous 13 games.

ORIOLES 7, YANKEES 6, 10 INNINGS

NEW YORK (AP)—Cedric Mullins hit a tiebreaking single in the 10th inning and scored on a throwing error to help Baltimore hold off the New York Yankees.

New York ace Gerrit Cole was charged with two runs over four-plus innings in an up-and-down season debut after returning from an elbow injury. He was on the hook for his first loss since Aug. 19 last year until Giancarlo Stanton rallied the Yankees late.

The slugger greeted All-Star reliever Yennier Cano with a three-run homer that pulled the Yankees to 5-4 in the seventh, then laced a tying single off closer Craig Kimbrel (5-2) with one out in the ninth.

It was Kimbrel's fourth blown save in 20 chances this season, but the Orioles bounced back.

Mullins blooped an RBI single to center field off Clay Holmes (1-3) that scored automatic runner Anthony Santander from second base with one out in the 10th. Mullins raced to second on the throw to the plate, then stole third and scored easily when catcher Jose Trevino's toss sailed high into left field.

RAY'S 3, TWINS 2, 10 INNINGS

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Tampa Bay scored on a throwing error by Minnesota's Royce Lewis with two outs in the 10th inning for a victory that stopped the Twins' six-game winning streak.

The Rays, who improved to a major league-best 25-11 in games decided by one or two runs, won for just the fourth time in their last 12 games.

Jason Adam (4-1) pitched a perfect ninth for the victory. Phil Maton worked a 1-2-3 inning in the 10th for his second save, with closer Pete Fairbanks unavailable after the thumb on his throwing hand was bruised by a comebacker the night before.

ROCKIES 7, DODGERS 6

DENVER (AP)—Brenton Doyle broke a ninth-inning tie with a sacrifice fly and Colorado rebounded from a tough loss to beat the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Doyle's fly ball to center was deep enough for Jake Cave to score from third, giving Colorado the victory a night after the Rockies blew a five-run lead in the ninth in ning in an 11-9 loss.

Cave and Elhehuris Montero led off the ninth with singles off Yohan Ramirez (0-3), and rookie Adael Amador, who had two hits, reached on a fielder's choice.

Michael Toglia homered and tripled and Jalen Beeks (3-3) pitched an inning of relief to help Colorado snap a four-game skid.

Shohei Ohtani doubled, singled and drove in three runs for Los Angeles. Freddie Freeman also had two hits for the Dodgers.

Los Angeles' Bobby Miller made his first start since April 10 after spending more than two months on the injured list because of inflammation in his right shoulder.

BREWERS 2, ANGELS 0

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP)—Freddy Peralta struck out eight over six innings of three-hit ball, outdueling Tyler Anderson in Milwaukee's victory over the Los Angeles Angels.

Rhys Hoskins and Willy Adames drove in runs for the Brewers, who took two of three in Anaheim to open their Southern California road trip.

Peralta (5-4) rebounded from a rough outing against Cincinnati last week with a strong effort against the punchless Angels. Although he walked two and wasn't particularly efficient, Peralta repeatedly escaped trouble.

Los Angeles got two runners into scoring position in the sixth, but Peralta retired Logan O'Hoppe on a hot grounder up the middle with his final pitch.

ATHLETICS 5, ROYALS 1

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—Luis Medina held down Kansas City to get his first victory in more than 11 months and Oakland won their second straight game following a nine-game skid, beating the Royals.

Medina (1-2) had lost five straight decisions since beating Boston on July 18 last season but was sharp against the struggling Royals. He allowed one run on an RBI double by Bobby Witt Jr. and six hits in 5 2/3 innings for the win in front of an announced crowd of 4,557 fans.

Brett Rooker hit a pair of RBI singles for Oakland and Zack Gelfof hit a solo homer to provide the offense. Medina and the bullpen did the rest, giving the A's their first back-to-back wins since a six-game winning streak that ended May 4.

A's relievers threw 3 1/3 scoreless innings, ending a streak of 13 straight games that the bullpen allowed at least one run.

Willie Mays, Giants' electrifying 'Say Hey Kid,' dies at 93

By HILLEL ITALIE
AP NATIONAL WRITER

 Willie Mays, the electrifying "Say Hey Kid" whose singular combination of talent, drive and exuberance made him one of baseball's greatest and most beloved players, has died. He was 93.

Mays' family and the San Francisco Giants jointly announced Tuesday night he had died earlier in the afternoon in the Bay Area.

"My father has passed away peacefully and among loved ones," son Michael Mays said in a statement released by the club. "I want to thank you all from the bottom of my broken heart for the unwavering love you have shown him over the years. You have been his life's blood."

The center fielder, who began his professional career in the Negro Leagues in 1948, had been baseball's oldest living Hall of Famer. He was voted into the Hall in 1979, his first year of eligibility, and in 1999 followed only Babe Ruth on The Sporting News' list of the game's top stars. The Giants retired his uniform number, 24, and set their AT&T Park in San Francisco on Willie Mays Plaza.

Mays died two days before a game between the Giants and St. Louis Cardinals to honor the Negro Leagues at Rickwood Field in Birmingham, Alabama.

"All of Major League Baseball is in mourning today as we are gathered at the very ballpark where a career and a legacy like no other began," Commissioner Rob Manfred said. "Willie Mays took his all-around brilliance from the Birmingham Black Barons of the Negro American League to the historic Giants franchise. From coast to coast ... Willie inspired generations of players and fans as the game grew and truly earned its place as our National Pastime."

Few were so blessed with each of the five essential qualities for a superstar—hitting for average, hitting for power, speed, fielding and throwing. Fewer so joyously exerted those qualities—whether launching home runs; dashing around the bases, loose-fitting cap flying off his head; or chasing down fly balls in center field and finishing the job with his trademark basket catch.

Over 23 major league seasons, virtually all with the New York/San Francisco Giants but also including one in the Negro Leagues, Mays batted .301, hit 660 home runs, totaled 3,293 hits, scored more than 2,000 runs and won 12 Gold Gloves. He was Rookie of the Year in 1951, twice was named the Most Valuable Player and finished in the top 10 for the MVP 10 other times. His lightning sprint and over-the-shoulder grab of an apparent extra base hit in the 1954 World Series remains the most celebrated defensive play in baseball history.

"When I played ball, I tried to make sure everybody enjoyed what I was doing," Mays told NPR in 2010. "I made the clubhouse guy fit me a cap that when I ran, the wind gets up in the bottom and it flies right off. People love that kind of stuff."

For millions in the 1950s and '60s and after, the smiling ballplayer with the friendly, high-pitched voice was a signature athlete and showman during an era when baseball was still the signature pastime. Awarded the Medal of Freedom by President Barack Obama in 2015, Mays left his fans with countless memories. But a single feat served to capture his magic—one so unstoppable it was simply called "The Catch."

In Game 1 of the 1954 World Series, the then-New York Giants hosted the Cleveland Indians, who had won 111 games in the regular season and were strong favorites in the postseason. The score was 2-2 in the top of the eighth inning. Cleveland's Vic Wertz faced reliever Don Liddle with none out, Larry Doby on second and Al Rosen on first.

With the count 1-2, Wertz smashed a fastball to deep center field. In an average park, with an average center fielder, Wertz would have homered, or at least had an easy triple. But the center field wall in the eccentrically shaped Polo Grounds was more than 450 feet away. And there was nothing close to average about the skills of Willie Mays.

Decades of taped replays have not diminished the astonishment of watching Mays race toward the wall, his back to home plate, reach out his glove and haul in the drive. What followed was also extraordinary: Mays managed to turn around while still moving forward, heave the ball to the infield and prevent Doby from scoring even as Mays spun to the ground. Mays himself would proudly point out that "the throw" was as important as "the catch."

"Soon as it got hit, I knew I'd catch the ball," Mays told biographer James S. Hirsch, whose book came out in 2010. "All the time I'm running back, I'm thinking, 'Willie, you've got to get this ball back to the infield.'"

"The Catch" was seen and heard by millions through radio and the then-emerging medium of television, and Mays became one of the first Black athletes with mass media appeal. He was a guest star on "The Donna Reed Show," "Bewitched" and other sitcoms. He inspired a handful of songs and was named first in Terry Cashman's 1980s novelty hit, "Talkin' Baseball (Willie, Mickey & The Duke)," a tribute in part to the brief era when New York had three future Hall of Famers in center: Mays, Mantle of the Yankees and Snider of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The Giants went on to sweep the Indians, with many citing Mays' play as the turning point. The impact was so powerful that 63 years later, in 2017, baseball named the World Series Most Valuable Player after him even though it was his only moment of post-season greatness. He appeared in three other World Series, in 1951 and 1962 for the Giants and 1973 for the Mets, batting just .239 with no home runs in the four series. (His one post-season homer was in the 1971 National League playoffs, when the Giants lost to the Pittsburgh Pirates).

But "The Catch" and his achievements during the regular season were greatness enough. Yankees and Dodgers fans may have fiercely challenged Mays' eminence, but Mantle and Snider did not. At a 1995 baseball writers dinner in Manhattan, with all three at the dais, Mantle raised the eternal question: Which of the three was better?

"We don't mind being second, do we, Duke?" he added.

Between 1954 and 1966, Mays drove in 100 or more runs 10 times, scored 100 or more 12 times, hit 40 or more homers six times, more than 50 homers twice and led the league in stolen bases four times. His numbers might have been bigger. He missed most of 1952 and all of 1953 because of military service, quite possibly costing him the chance to overtake Ruth's career home run record of 714, an honor that first went to Henry Aaron, then Mays' godson, Barry Bonds.

He likely would have won more Gold Gloves if the award had been established before 1956. He insisted he would have led the league in steals more often had he tried.

"I am beyond devastated and overcome with emotion. I have no words to describe what you mean to me," Bonds wrote on Instagram.

Mays was fortunate in es-center field, he called pitches and positioned other fielders. He boasted that he relied on his own instincts, not those of any coach, when deciding whether to try for an extra base.

Sports writer Barney Kremento has often been credited with nicknaming him "The Say Hey Kid," referring to Mays' spirited way of greeting his teammates. Moments on and off the field sealed the public's affection. In 1965, Mays defused a horrifying brawl after teammate Juan Marichal clubbed Los Angeles Dodgers catcher John Roseboro with a bat. Mays led a bloodied Roseboro away and sat with him on the clubhouse bench of the Dodgers, the Giants' hated rivals.

Years earlier, when living in Manhattan, he endeared himself to young fans by playing in neighborhood stickball games.

"I used to have maybe 10 kids come to my window," he said in 2011 while visiting the area of the old Polo Grounds. "Every morning, they'd come at 9 o'clock. They'd knock on my window, get me up. And I had to be out at 9:30. So they'd give me a chance to go shower. They'd give me a chance to eat breakfast. But I had to be out there at 9:30, because that's when they wanted to play. So I played with them for about maybe an hour."

He was born in Westfield, Alabama, in 1931, the son of a Negro League player who wanted Willie to do the same, playing catch with him and letting him sit in the dugout. Young Mays was so gifted an athlete that childhood friends swore that basketball, not baseball, was his best sport.

By high school he was playing for the Birmingham Black Barons, and late in life would receive an additional 10 hits to his career total, 3,293, when Negro League statistics were recognized in 2024 by Major League Baseball. With Robinson breaking the major league's color barrier in 1947, Mays' ascension became inevitable. The Giants signed him after he graduated from high school (he had to skip his senior prom) and sent him to their minor league affiliate in Trenton, New Jersey. He began the 1951 season with Minneapolis, a Triple-A club. After 35 games, he was batting a head-turning .477 and was labeled by one scout as "the best prospect in America."

Giants Manager Leo Durocher saw no reason to wait and demanded that Mays, barely 20 at the time, join his team's starting lineup.

Pikaboo, Albert top ROF 2 main events

 Saipan's Shane "Pikaboo" Alvarez and Guam's Jake Albert came out victorious in the two main events of last Saturday's Trench Warz Promotions' Ring of Fire 2 at the Garapan Central Park.

Alvarez, fighting out of Trench Tech Gym, topped Guam's Isaac "Lion Heart" Crisostomo in a unanimous decision in their kickboxing duel, while GuamMuayThai's Albert did the same thing against Alvarez's teammate Ram "Korean Blood" Lee in their boxing bout.

Alvarez got the nod of all judges—CNMI Wrestling Federation president Rick Bauer, NMI News Services' Brad Ruzsala, and local MMA analyst Ben Salas—30-27, 30-27, and 30-27. Albert also won all three rounds with a score of 39-27, 29-28, and 29-28.

"I was accurate with my strikes and landed a good amount of heavy shots each round. Even when I started feeling tired. I was able to dodge and counter. My opponent was super tough as no matter how many shots I landed on him he kept pushing forward and never backed down. Was a super fun fight after being out of the game for a long time. Kid is tough and has a bright future ahead of himself, he's only 20. If he keeps it up and gets more wins and experience under his belt, I definitely owe him a rematch if he'd like one!" said Alvarez.

It was already sort of a return engagement for the 30-year-old Financial & Insurance Services Group staff as the COVID-19 pandemic put the island's MMA scene into a standstill since 2019.

"Felt great to step back in the ring as it's been six years since my last fight! This is also the heaviest I've ever fought at in my career, but I was still fast and felt very strong. Definitely was fun and I'm motivated to stay in shape and stay consistent. I'm not as in shape as I want to be, but considering only 2-3 months of consistent training over the past six years I definitely feel I'm on my way back to my prime," said Alvarez after his fight.

He then dedicated this win to Trench Tech Gym and all his training partners who also fought in Ring of Fire 2.

"Although we fight our fights alone, it's definitely a team effort in the gym sparring with and pushing each other daily. I'd also like to thank my sponsor this fight Caravan Restaurant as they were a huge help in making me cut the weight and still feel strong. I was at my heaviest before this fight at 205 lbs and dropped down to 170 lbs. Also, to all my fans and supporters who continue to believe in my skills no matter how long it's been we do this for y'all and the haters as well as they keep us motivated and focused. Also, to my girl Candy and son Styles Alvarez because this is my first official Father's Day thanks to him. They both motivated me to get back to my best and continue striving for greatness," he said.

Albert, for his part, said he was happy with the unanimous decision victory over Lee.

"Not the outcome I wanted, but regardless I am happy with the results. I'm happy about my win as all the hard work paid off from my fight camp. I want to dedicate this victory to my coaches for training me, correcting me, and being understanding. Also, to my teammates and supporters," he said.

As for his opponent, Albert said Lee "did great! Push through all three rounds."

Other winners of ROF 2 are the following: Jyro Cruz, Nate Zhuang, Kody Palacios, Aiden Nekaifes, Justin Agulto, Jun San Nicolas, Marnel Cornelio, Thomas Agulto, Beng Beng Palacios, Phil Gregorio, Dylan Promdi, Keith Sablan, Dylan Benavente, Etan Afleje, Jose Camacho, Jimmy Polk, Jeremiah Salvador, Boni Sagana, Donovan Santos, and John Lee.

The fight between Dion Ogo and Lorenzo Reyes ended in a draw and there was also an exhibition match between SkyLee Mesa and Grachen Pintor.

ace on the mound that left them almost hitless in their debut, the NMI team managed to record seven hits. First base woman Mayiah Duenas hit an inside the park home run, while Christy Aldan hit a triple, scored a run, and had two hits. The other run was scored by Kianu Aldan in the third inning.

With yet another medal rush from swimming and tennis and athletics also chipping in, the CNMI regained first place in the medal standings with 53 gold, 19 silver, and 19 bronze medals—topping the 44-gold medal record the CNMI posted in the 2010 Micro Games in Palau. Nauru is second with a 45, 13, and 4 gold-silver-bronze haul, while sitting in third is host Marshall Islands with 9 gold, 19 silver, and 29 bronze.

my teammates".

On her bronze medal-placing, she said, "I was actually very surprised but I was happy too. That's just another medal to our overall count."

Rangamar also plays basketball for the national team and said as a two-sport athlete, "I think after all these years that I've been competing in these Games, I think that certainly helps in how I prepare everyday. It helps that I have experience and the support of teammates and coaches... So yeah, I just try to take it day by day, see how my body feels, and try to produce."

Casey Cruz made her way to the finals of the 100m sprints with her personal best of 12.60 seconds. She said of her PB, "my 100m race was fantastic! I surprised myself, especially after recovering from an ankle injury. I feel incredibly blessed and ready for the next race!"

For seasoned sprinter Zariniae Sapong, she broke her personal best in the 100m with a time of 12.87 seconds in the finals, after resetting it the first time in the prelims at 12.95 seconds.

Athletics team coach Elias Rangamar said of the medal haul on Day 1, "They really passed my expectations—first day and three gold? I'm proud of all of them".

Today, NMI track and field athletes will take on Day 2, with more medals and records on their mind.

Aleksenko dominated again in the men's 50-yard freestyle with a time of 20.55, before Battalones fell to a familiar rival in host Marshall Islands' Ann-Marie Hepler (25.36-25.60).

Watanabe added another gold in the men's 200-yard breaststroke with a swim of 2:11.02, while Battalones returned to winning form in the same event in the women's division by touching the wall in 2:31.30. Litulumar was second in 2:44.77.

The CNMI ended the day and the pool competition with back-to-back relay wins as Pajirilla, Miller, Watanabe, and Aleksenko were golden in the men's 400-yard medley relay in 3:35.51. Ditto for Raho, Litulumar, Guerrero, and Battalones women's 400-yard medley relay (4:15.29).

CNMI National Swimming coach Hiroyuki Kimura said Team NMI's domination in the pool was expected.

For Heras, she duked it out against Leilah Etscheit, 3-6, 7-6(2), 10-5. She was down 5-6 in the second set but gained a tiebreaker and won, 7-2. That sent the match to a super tiebreaker with Heras coming out on top 10-6 to secure the gold medal for the NMI women.

In the doubles, Heras and Hoo Wang teamed up against Leilah Etscheit and Williams for a resounding, 6-0, 6-0 win for their first point.

In the evening events, Tan reclaimed her gold medal throne in the 5,000m with a time of 19:25.54 and left the three other competitors in her dust. A distant second place was Guam's Keira Paz at 20:47.62, while bronze was Palau's Ava Planz at 23:11.99.

Tan said after her win, "It was honestly really hard because the weather was super humid and hot like Solomons and Saipan. I also practically ran the whole race alone, so there was no one to pace me or help me reach a certain goal time, but, I said, 'just stick to your plan, run your own race, and see what happens and it worked out, so here we are.'"

She said her goal was to run under 19 minutes because she knew it was hot, but said at the time of her interview without her official results out, "if that's the case, yay, if it's not yay either way. I brought home a gold so that's all that matters."

With her first ever Micronesian Games, she said, "It's always nice to represent the flag. Not everyone has the opportunity to compete in the Micro Games, Pacific Games, Pacific Mini Games, Oceania—so just super grateful."

With her teammates' strong performance and medal haul so far, she said, "they've all been working hard throughout the year, and I think for most Colin Ramsey and Robbie Schorr tied up Aarman Sachdev and Aidan Schembari, 6-0, 6-0, for one point.

In the first singles match between Schorr and Schembari, the former whizzed past the latter in two sets, 6-4, 6-1, for the second point. Then, Ramsey claimed the gold for the men's team after a tough three-set matchup against Sachdev, 2-6, 7-5, 10-6, for the third point and completed the sweep.

As for the men's basketball team, they lost against Pohnpei, 52-62, and put them out of medal contention with a 2-2 record.

They have a game against Guam today to wrap up pool play.

Team captain Preston Basa said after the game, "It was a great tournament. A lot of the fied, I would step out."

In the javelin event, Maria Quitugua threw her way to the team's third gold last night with a best distance of 32.33m. Silver was Chuuk's Kayla Kanemoto at 31.78, and bronze went to Nauru's Juneen Peniti with a throw of 30.14m.

Quitugua said of her win, "I'm so proud of myself. I'm so grateful to be given this opportunity to represent my island again. I'm grateful to my parents for their sacrifice, my coach for giving me this opportunity and training me. I couldn't have done it without them."

She then dedicated her win to her late brother and track star, Traven Quitugua.

As for the second bronze medal, two-sport athlete Lia Rangamar secured bronze in her debut in the hammer throw with a distance of 21.83m. Gold went to host Marshall Islands' Mia Pulianas at 33.86mm while silver was Nauru's Jaya-Shalimar Teboua at 22.40m.

Rangamar, whose main event was the javelin throw, was also placed in the hammer throw with other athletes who are also new to the event in order to have more competitors. With a 10-minute crash course for the hammer throw before the event, she said, "it was very fun. Everyone was very supportive. I think everyone of us was new to that event and it was nice to have it alongside my sister [Kina Rangamar] and

With his win, he said he felt pretty good but hopes that the youth will take up the sport of track and field. He said, "The best feeling in sport is actually representing your island, right? The reason I was chosen was because I qualified but if there were younger ones who quali-

MAJURO, Marshall Islands— After a long-winded first day of tennis events in the 2024 Micronesian Games, the NMI National Tennis Team wrapped the day up with a gold medal in the team competition at the Long Island Tennis Court yesterday.

As tennis competitions just started, they only have until Sunday to conclude all their games and with that, the team finished their games late last night.

The NMI women's team bagged the first medal for tennis against Pohnpei, 3-0.

Both Isabel Heras and Irin Chung made a comeback in their matches to secure the last two points for the gold medal. Chung, against Louisa Williams, won 4-6, 7-5, 10-8.

According to NMI team head coach Jeff Race, he said Chung lost the first set and was down 2-5 in the second before working

The CNMI National Swimming Team pretty much ended the pool competition in the 2024 Micronesian Games the way they started it after winning almost all events yesterday in the Kwajalein Pool in Kwajalein, Marshall Islands.

The last day of pool competition—today they will tackle the ocean swim—yielded much like the pattern of the last four days: 11 gold medals, three silver, and three bronze.

The NMI Team started things off by sweeping the opening relay events as Kean
